

Castle Hill House is a beautifully restored residence built in 1786, previously home to Admirals; Attorneys; Archdeacons; and the Veasey banking family. It was the wartime HQ to the RAF's Pathfinder Force who planned and co-ordinated air campaigns through continental Europe.

This town-centre Grade II listed building has been sympathetically converted to serviced offices ranging from 2 to 10 desk spaces. All office suites are fully serviced, with a professionally manned reception to meet and greet visitors and offer a range of administrative support.

Architecturally the offices have high ceilings and huge windows characteristic of the period. We have installed CAT5e throughout the entire building making it very easy for clients to move seamlessly within the building as their needs change. Equipped with a secure, air conditioned communications room with individually lockable server space if required.

There is allocated car parking on site.
